1st May

May Day, also called Workers' Day or International Workers' Day, is the day when people around the world remember the historic struggles and gains made by workers and the labor movement. It is celebrated in many countries on May 1. In Europe May 1st was historically associated with rural pagan festivals. However, the original meaning of the day was gradually replaced by the modern association with the labor movement. May Day has been recognized as a public holiday, and it continues to be celebrated with picnics and parties while serving as the occasion for demonstrations and rallies in support of workers.

The second anniversary of the IROMAG

By IROUNMO

Two years ago, the International Relations Office of Dzemal Bijedic University started a new project called the International Relations Magazine 'Iromag'. It was the first edition of the magazine. Since then, every month, the magazine has published important stories from Dzemal Bijedic University of Mostar, as well as stories from the City on the Neretva River and the entire Bosnia and Herzegovina. Iromag has two editions: one in English for incoming students and one in Bosnian for outgoing students. In the magazine, many students share their stories about their exchange experience to encourage others to apply for the exchange program. Iromag also introduces incoming students to Bosnian-Herzegovinian traditions, recipes for various local dishes, and the famous Bosnian coffee that everyone should try. The Iromag team is proud that the stories in both editions are different. The magazine is the result of the hard work and efforts of the International Relations Office. Each issue of Iromag is a challenge, and the team is excited about future projects planned by the International Relations Office at UNMO.
