Kravice

By IROUNMO

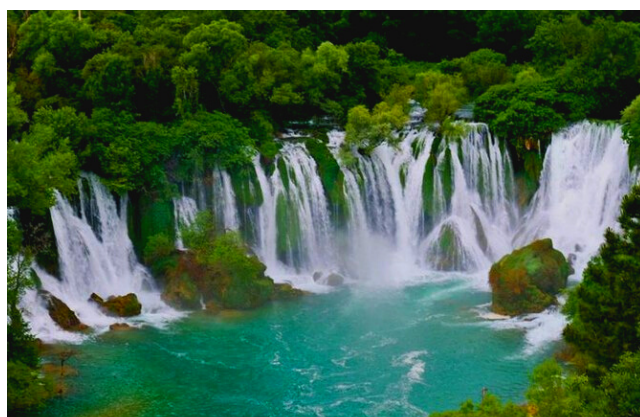

With the arrival of summer days, most people think about going to the swimming pools to cool off and ease the summer heat to some extent. Although most people prefer the swimming pools or the seaside, there are some interested in exotic destinations and locations. Those who want to try something new do not have to go far. Waterfalls Kravica in Bosnia and Herzegovina are among one the most beautiful beaches in the world. Time Out magazine has included Kravica waterfall in 12th place on their list of 15 of the most spectacular places to swim in the world. The Kravica waterfall is located on the 50 km long course of the Trebižat river in Studenci near Ljubuški. It was created in the area where the Trebižat River splits, creating a magnificent 30 meters high waterfall.

Crystal clear and turquoise water surrounded by greenery forms a water amphitheater with a diameter of 120 meters with a natural pool. In the summer period, due to the lower water level of the river, tourists can not only swim in the pool under the falls but also enjoy different water sports. This oasis in stone attracts around 200 thousand tourists a year.

The Sredena areas around the Kravica waterfall is the geological natural monument of Bosnia and Herzegovina. In the past, numerous mills, and stupas for rolling cloth were active by the waterfall. Today these stone mills mostly stand by the river as a reminder of some ancient times, and few of them are still in operation. The experience of visiting the Kravica waterfall is completed by a nearby small cave, open on both sides with stalactites made of calcium carbonate, an old mill, and a boat. Kravica is one of the most beautiful natural beauties in Herzegovina in general.

Erasmus experience

By IROUNMO

My name is İlknur Gezer, and I am 21 years old. I am a Turkish Erasmus student coming from Kırklareli University to Dzemal Bijedic University of Mostar. I am 3rd grade student studying Translation and Interpreting in the Faculty of Arts and Sciences. However, in Mostar I am studying English Language and Literature in the Faculty of Humanities. These two departments are quite similar in terms of the lessons we are responsible from. That's why, The lessons I took here helped me a lot to improve myself and develop in my field. Nevertheless, Mostar did not only contributed me in my education and language, but also this place touched every part of me in a way.

Bosnia and Hercegovina, especially Mostar firstly impressed me with the warm welcome of our teachers, classmates, and our Erasmus coordinator Mirsada. When I first landed here I was nervous and afraid about the safety of the place, cuisine, and people whether they are gonna welcome me or not. Nevertheless, in time I fastly understood that I will have an amazing experience here because even before we came here they helped us to find accommodation and spoke with our landlords to make sure its safe which also relieved my family in Turkey.

As a fussy eater, even in Turkey, I was expecting to be hungry all the time. Unfortunately, I gained 4 kilos here due to delicious traditional foods such as Burek, Pie, Cevapi, Çorba, etc., and easily reachable international foods from all around the world. My first recommendation to my slim friends thinking about coming here is not to come here if they want to continue life as skinny because of big portions and yummy foods.

Moreover, I had a chance to witness the beautiful nature of some places by going to Pocitelj, Blagaj, Kravice, etc, and learn its deep-rooted history by going to some museums in Sarejova and Mostar. As a person who is not interested in history that much, this place forced me to learn its history to understand them. Because, Even though, this country can be thought of as just naturally beautiful, when you enter this country it makes you learn more and more about their culture and history. As a funny story, one time my Austrian friend send me a beautiful landscape in Mostar by saying "For a long time the Turks and Austrians fought for this beautiful land. Today, we are both just guests" which also explains namely how respectable and amazing the history Bosnia has. Every road I walk and every building I see here has historical value due to its rich history of rule under Yugoslavia, Croatia, Germany, and two important empires which allows Bosnia to experience every part of the history.

We are developers 2022

By IROUNMO

“AI is not our competitor but a co-pilot” said Thomas Dohmke, the CEO of GitHub during his opening keynote speech on June 14th. Since GitHub is one of the programmers’ most important websites today, it was obvious there would be a full house to hear GitHub’s CEO share his knowledge. Thomas talked about his connection to Berlin, and his history as a developer. However, one of the main takeaways was the introductory presentation about the GitHub Copilot. GitHub Copilot is an AI pair programmer that helps you write code faster and with less work, something like an auto-complete function. It is powered by OpenAI Codex. It sends your comments and code to the GitHub Copilot service, which then uses OpenAI Codex to synthesize and suggest individual lines and whole functions. It’s hard to believe how far coding has come, and everybody super excited to see how far it can go.

After 1103 days, the world’s most important event for developers had finally begun on June 14-15th! CityCube Berlin got swarmed with programmers from all over the globe. Needless to say, they all had a great time. Seeing over 10 000 bright dev minds brought together in person again after too long of a wait was simply breath-taking.

Here are 2 moments that defined this year’s WeAreDevelopers World Congress:

Bjarne Stroustrup held TWO lectures on C++

When Bjarne Stroustrup was confirmed as a speaker at World Congress 2022, everybody knew his talk was going to be legendary. Bjarne's talks are like university lectures but way cooler, way more engaging, and way more entertaining (nothing against universities, please stay in school kids). After his speech, packed main hall of developers was left in awe.

However, one lecture was just not enough. After talking about the evolution of C++ on the main stage during the morning of the second day, Bjarne gave a more high-level talk on using C++ in constrained environments the same day afternoon on a side stage with around 500 people attending. When asked about lectures the participants learned the most from, Bjarne's lectures were always in the top three. Pro tip: check out these top 10 C++ job interview questions.

Denis Mušić and Adil Joldić, professors at the Faculty of Information Technologies attended the event

Theatre experience in Sarajevo

By IROUNMO

The play was named "Snijeg". It is a play that is inspired by a book, which is originally called "Kar". This book has been written by a Turkish author, Orhan Pamuk, who has won a Nobel Prize in literature. I have not read the book before, but because it is a political book and tells the effects of ignorance on Turkish society, the plot is something that I am quite similar to. Just as in the book, the play was emphasizing the problems in Turkey such as women suicides because of pressure, several political groups, and Turkish and Kurdish nationalism. It was a really dramatic and meaningful play. Seeing that the problems of my country have a meaning in another country and they are with us, I was affected. The performers also were so amazing that they really reflect the emotions so well. But the only problem was technical that subtitles were not synchronized with the play, so it caused sometimes to miss some parts of the story.

Since my childhood, I have been interested in theatres. Thanks to living in a metropolis, I have always had the chance to watch amazing plays and talented, special performers. I find this experience more exciting than watching TV at home or catching a movie at the cinema. When I watch a theatre play, I feel like I am a part of it. I feel all the emotions directly, so I can empathize more with the story. As a theatre enthusiast, I have always wondered how would it be to watch a play in another country and with another culture. So, when I came here, I really wanted to watch something in the theatre even if it is in Bosnian. Because for me, feeling that atmosphere is also as important as understanding the story. Luckily, while I was searching for it, I saw there was a play with English subtitles in Sarajevo.

Srebrenica

By IROUNMO

The Bosnian Institute in the United Kingdom has published a list of 296 villages destroyed around Srebrenica three years before the genocide. In the first three months of war (April–June 1992), 296 predominantly Bosniak (Bosnian Muslim) villages in the region around Srebrenica were destroyed. Some 70,000 Bosniaks were forced to leave their homes while at least 3,166 Bosniaks (documented deaths) including many women, children and the elderly were killed.

Students Union of Dzemal Bijedic University of Mostar organized the visit to the Srebrenica memorial centre in Potočari. The students of the Dzemal Bijedic University of Mostar, members of the Info service for youth and citizens of the City of Mostar visited the memorial centre in Potočari to mark the 27th anniversary of the Srebrenica genocide.

The Srebrenica massacre is considered as the worst episode of mass murder within Europe since World War II. More than eight thousand unarmed Bosniaks aged 14 to 70 were killed from July 11 to 19, 1995. More than six hundred children were killed. The youngest victim was born on July 13, 1995, and it was exhumed from a mass grave near Srebrenica in 2012.
